

The Qu'Appelle Progress.

Vol. VII.

QU'APPELLE, N.W.T., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1891.

No. 6.

WINNIPEG.

DAWSON, BOLE & CO., Wholesale Druggists, Winnipeg, Man.

QU'APPELLE.

A. HOLLINGSHEAD, House, Sign and Carriage Painter, Graining, Glazing, Paper Hanging and Kalsomining promptly executed.

A. MCKENZIE, Dealer in Confectionery, all kinds of Fruit, etc.

A. C. PATERSON, Real Estate Agent, Desirable Farms Lands for Sale, Office Progress Printing Office.

CITY MEAT MARKET. Fresh Meat of all kinds kept constantly on hand, at lowest prices. W. H. BELA, Proprietor.

D. R. C. E. CARTERSON, Qu'Appelle, Physician, Surgeon, Coroner Etc. Graduate Toronto University and Lieutenant College Physicians and Surgeons, Ont.

G. S. DAVIDSON, Agent for the Manitoba Assuranc Co. All kinds of Property taken at rates.

G. N. DAVIDSON, Licensed Auctioneer, for the North-West Territories. Sales conducted on the shortest notice. Arrangements can be made at my Office, or at the Progress Office, Qu'Appelle.

H. A. AXFORD, General Agent for the H. Massey Manufacturing Company. All kinds of Agricultural Implements.

J. P. BEAUCHAMP, General Merchant.

J. JOHN MCKENZIE, Merchant Tailor.

C. TOWN & EDWARDS, general dealers in Agricultural Implements, Threshing Machines, Carriages, Cutters, Grain Crushers, Pumps, etc.

Q. UEN'S HOTEL, James Horne, Proprietor.

R. B. FERGUSON, The Jeweler, Selling at Cost.

R. JOHNSTON, Cavery and Feed Stable.

R. E. SMITH, Tinsmith, Artisan, has opened a shaving parlor next door to S. H. Collins' shoe store, where he is ready to do shaving and hair-cutting in all styles. He receives the patronage of the public. Shop opens from 7:30 to 22 o'clock.

S. H. CASWELL, General Merchant.

A. D. DICKSON, Physician, Attorney, Office, first door south of the Queen's Hotel, Qu'Appelle St.

W. M. SMITH, Advocate, Notary Public, Commissioner and Real Estate Agent.

W. T. THOMPSON, D. T. S., Dominion Land Surveyor, and Civil Engineer, Authorized Surveyor for connecting official surveys and plans, Qu'Appelle Station.

BURDOCK PILLS

FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROFOUND IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE ADD TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

DR. BELL, M.D.

M. B. C. S. INC.

Office at Mr. Brydon's store, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., other times by appointment.

G. H. V. BULYEA

QU'APPELLE.

Insurance & General Agent.

DEALER IN

FURNITURE,

Flour & Feed, Etc.

Agent for the Celebrated Buxury Organ.

In stock, a full line of Coffins & Caskets.

Very Cheap Rates to & from the Old Country. Allan, Dominion, Beaver & White Star Lines.

Apply to your local agent.

E. W. WARNER, Qu'Appelle. Or to ROBERT KERR, General Passenger Agent, Winnipeg.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL, INDIAN HEAD, N.W.T.

Proprietor.

Enlarged and thoroughly renovated throughout.

Commodious Sample Rooms for Commercial Travellers.

PORTER

MEETS ALL TRAINS.

W. R. BOYD,

First Class Rigs.

Draught Horses.

LIVERY,

Feed and Sale Stable.

First Class Rigs.

Daily Stage to Fort Qu'Appelle.

W. L. Clark, V.S.

QU'APPELLE.

HAVING had considerable practice in England, is enabled to offer the public genuine and properly amalgamated preparations in horse and cattle medicines which his experience warrants.

W. L. C. while learning the veterinary art, was impressed with the fact that the value of a horse depends so much upon his feet, for no matter how perfect the other parts may be, the horse's services are diminished or altogether lost and knowing that bad shodding is the most common cause of lameness, he will make Scientific principles in horse-shoeing a specialty. Contracts for medical attendance. Operations performed. All charges reasonable.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

WM. BRYDON, Druggist, Stationer

Christmas Cards.

FANCY GOODS

In great variety.

CALL AND INSPECT THE NEW STOCK.

QU'APPELLE ROLLER MILLS.

Now in Operation.

A full Supply of all kinds of

FLOUR, BRAN SHORTS,

OATMEAL, ETC.

Always on hand.

Chopping & Grinding Done.

Highest Market Price Paid for Wheat.

D. H. McMILLAN & Co.

The Qu'Appelle Progress,

is Published every Thursday

At The Progress Printing Office, in the Town of Qu'Appelle, Assin., Canada.

The rates for our advertising space by contract are as follows:

One week	One month	Three months
$6.00	$8.00	$15.00
Half column	4.00	6.00
Quarter column	3.00	5.00
Three inches	2.00	4.00
Two inches	1.50	3.00
		5.00
		20.00
		Business cards $1.00 per month payable quarterly.

The above rates apply to section sales, entertainment, advertisements, notices, or anything of a temporary nature. Annual advertisements, 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line each additional insertion. Yearly advertisements allowed to be changed monthly, if often $1.00 will be charged for each additional change.

Business local, 50 cents for first twenty-five words, 2 cents for each additional word.

The publisher reserves the right to refuse to insert advertisements of a questionable or objectionable character.

Subscription price: $1.00 per annum, invariably in advance; single copies 5 cents.

A liberal commission will be allowed to parties who are willing to act as agents for us. Write for terms.

address,

THE PROGRESS PRINTING CO.,

Qu'Appelle, Assin.

A. C. PATERSON, Manager.

THURSDAY, NOV. 26th, 1891.

RECONSTRUCTION.

The Hon. Mr. Abbott has not yet announced the personnel of his new Cabinet, and the various forecasts of the Globe's Ottawa correspondent and other equally reliable authorities have all so far failed to materialize. In this reconstruction we are as much interested as any part of the Dominion, and as to the Department of Interior more concerned than any of the Eastern Provinces. We fully realize the vital importance to us of having an able man at the head of this Department, and still we have not yet felt any cause for alarm. Some of the eastern papers say that Mr. Dewdney must give place to another man, but fail to point out on what ground such a change is desirable. To our knowledge the people of the Territories have never shown any indifference in matters that directly concern our welfare, and we do not think they would be slow now to express their desire for a change if they felt that such would be to our benefit. If an undesirable change were anticipated we would be equally active in protesting against it. Our passiveness is the result of confidence that the Premier knows how efficiently the Department has been conducted for the past three years, and appreciates the executive abilities of the present Minister. It is claimed by a few that the Minister of the Interior, in order to be a strength to the party, should be a strong debater. If this contention holds good in one department it certainly should in all, and yet we know that the greatest statesman Canada ever knew retained in his Cabinets men who were never known to take an active part in debates. Even ambition has not given anyone the hardihood to say that these were not the right men in the right place. The able administration of the most important department is of more consequence to us than fine oratory, and while we are satisfied with the competency of the present Minister, why should a change be made, or even suggested? The handsome majority of nearly eight hundred given Mr. Dewdney in March last shows that he is most acceptable to the people of Eastern Assiniboia, and few in the Territories can be found who would not be sorry to lose a man who has done so much to promote the welfare of the settler.

For full information as to time, rates, etc., apply to nearest Ticket Agent, to E. W. Warner, Agent, Qu'Appelle, or to ROBERT KERR, General Passenger Agent, Winnipeg.

ALL KINDS OF

JOB PRINTING

NEATLY & EXPEDITIOUSLY

EXECUTED AT

The "Progress" Office,

QU'APPELLE STATION.

CHOICE FLOWERING & VEGETABLE PLANTS

WHOLESALE & RETAIL

TO ALL GREENHOUSES

AND GARDENS

WE WILL SEND

ALL KINDS OF

SEEDS

AND PLANTS

FOR EXPORTATION

AND IMPORTATION

FOR EXPORTATION

TIES, HUMAN AND DIVINE.

BY B. L. FARJEON,

Author of "Great Porter Square," "The Mystery of M. Felix," "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," Etc., Etc.

The First Link—Supplied by Mr. MILLINGTON, of Shepherd's Bush.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Mr. Barlow was anxious that I should omit none of my experiences in connection with this history I have at his request added another chapter, which will be my last.

During the six months that elapsed after my "night out" with Simpson I saw nothing more of him. He did not trouble me, and you may be sure I did not trouble him. There was a sufficient reason, as I afterwards learned, for our non-meeting. He and his master had gone abroad, and for the next few months this time remained out of England. I did not, however, venture west to Chudleigh Park. Miss Haldane wrote to me once about Honoria, but I had no news to communicate, and I replied to that effect. These were the only letters that passed between us. George, of course, kept up his correspondence with Rachel D'Urso, but their marriage appeared as far off as ever. It did not lessen my lad's love for his sweet heart, nor, as her letters proved, her for him. From these letters I gathered that Miss Haldane's life at Chudleigh Park was rather lonely. She received no visits, and paid none a sign that she had made no friendships of an enduring nature among those she met there. On two occasions George informed me that he was likely to see Miss Haldane and Rachel coming to London for a week or two, and the expectation set him in a glow of delight. But these visits were not paid, being frustrated, as I understood, by Mr. Haldane, who wrote from abroad that his daughter was to remain at the Hall. Once, and once only, did George go to Chudleigh, to see Rachel; he spent a Sunday there and stopped at The Brindley Cow; that he did not go again was due to Rachel, who thought it best that she should keep away for her young mother's sake. I took the blame of this upon myself. George was my son, and as I was not in favor with Mr. Haldane my lad's appearance in Chudleigh might have been misconstrued.

"You will be an old man, and Rachel an old woman," I said to George, "before you come together."

"Not quite that, I hope, dad," said George. "Things will be all right before long."

I did not have much faith in long engagements, and so I hinted to George; but no one is to be satisfied that nothing could occur to tempt him and Rachel being true to each other.

"She is worth waiting for," he said, "and it's no use fretting."

Mr. Barlow also was at a standstill; he had made no further progress in the affair upon which he was engaged, for although he made no fresh discoveries he was still in commission. It was his opinion that Mr. Haldane had left England to escape detection. I remarked that if this were the case Mr. Haldane must have had some suspicion cast upon him, and was being watched. Mr. Barlow concurred, and said something more had reached Mr. Haldane's ears which put him on his guard. My old partner paid me now regular visits, which George and I returned. He and his wife had grown very fond of George, and about once a week we all took supper together, at Barlow's house or mine. One of these nights, when we were walking from his house, Barlow, who liked a little walk after supper, being with us, he asked me if I had anything particular to do to-morrow. I answered, nothing.

"I want you to spend an hour with me," he said. "Come to the office between two and three."

I presented myself accordingly and we turned from Surry street into the Strand, and there took a bus to the Marble Arch. I may mention that it was the height of the season, and London was very gay, by reason of a Royal visit, which set society circles in a flutter.

"I'm going," said Mr. Barlow, "to take you to Rotten Row."

"Anything special going on there?" I asked.

"We shall see," was his reply.

This was somewhat anticlimactic, but I knew that Barlow seldom did anything special without a special reason. In this "bus he volunteered another piece of information.

"Mr. Haldane is in London," he said.

"And Mrs. Haldane?" I inquired.

"I don't know, but it is very likely."

Arriving at Rotten Row we found a good place by the railings, and watched the panorama of fashion as it passed by and repeated itself on horseback and in carriages.

"It is a favourite pastime of mine," said Mr. Barlow. "I like to see the swells doing duty."

"There are plenty of them," I said, "who don't seem to be enjoying themselves much."

"It is a sad pleasure to many," said Mr. Barlow, "especially to the carriage swells; but it is a duty they owe to society to show themselves. Look at that lot."

There were three elderly ladies in the turn-out, and unutterable weariness reigned.

The fads, which were worn and past with lateness, were all the same I said I would never be what I was and what I was.

"Bunkum," observed Mr. Barlow. "If you're a swell you would do likewise."

I disputed this, but Barlow would not be gainsaid. It did not escape me that at the time we were talking he appeared to be looking out for something not in the common way, and a sudden lighting up of his features revealed to him that it was approaching.

In a handsome Victoria, the appointments of which were absolutely faultless, sat a young girl whom she came closer to, and caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Ah," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you about the girl Honoria I brought to London from Chudleigh Park?"

"Perfectly," he replied. "I don't forget much."

"I could almost swear," I said, "that the very girl is sitting in that carriage."

"Wait till she comes round again," said Mr. Barlow.

I strained my eye till I saw her in the distance. She was richly dressed, and leaned back in her carriage with the born negligent air of a lady of leisure. That one so beautiful should attract universal attention was not surprising; and indeed she was very beautiful. No trace of despair was on her face, which bore the expression of one accustomed to admiration. Hats were raised to her, and now and again a mounted cavalier caroled by her side, and exchanged salutations. Some she received graciously, some coldly, but even in her smile there was an air of disdain and power which appeared to submit. No hat saluted her, and I acknowledged her, but I could not help but feel that she came closer to us, caused the blood to rise into my face.

"Well," said Mr. Barlow, who was observing me closely as the Victoria approached.

"Barlow," I cried, seizing his arm, "you remember my telling you

Home & Gossip.

Little Local Links in the Town's Chain of History.

QU'APPELLE.

—Mr. T. McKay, M.L.A., of Prince Albert, is in favor of local option.

—Mr. W. C. Cameron will ship his cars to England and his wheat to Toronto.

—The Progress will be supplied from now to the end of next year (1882) for $1.00.

—Mr. J. H. MacCaul found his valuable deerhound, Duke, dead one morning last week.

—Mr. James Weidman, editor of the Rat Portage Record, is expected in town on Sunday next.

—Mr. Charles Gibson has returned from Calgary, where he had been spending the summer.

—Messrs. Cowan & Edwards have gone to Winnipeg to settle up a successful year's business.

—Buy your apples from A. McKenzie before the 10th of December, or they will cost you $5 per barrel.

—Mr. Wm. Henderson, a former resident of Qu'Appelle, paid his many friends a visit on Saturday last.

—J. F. Guerin, L.D.S., dental surgeon, will be in his office today (Thursday, the 2d) until further notice.

—Mr. James Smith threshed 1188 bushels of wheat, the crop on 25 acres. He expects a much larger yield on the balance of 200 acres.

—The Regina Leader says that $17000 were paid out for wheat at Regina one day last week. How often does pay day come up there?

—Mr. George Hudson has been transferred from the Medicine Hat division of the C.P.R., and will henceforth have charge of a baggage car from Moose Jaw to Brandon.

—Messrs. Crossley and Hunter have gone to the coast for the winter. They will return in the spring, and will hold services in many of the towns of the Territories.

—“What you don't know about marriage Mr. Spence will tell you to-night.”—Leader. If it has no better results than what we told us about Prohibition we don't want to know.

—The Port Arthur Herald of the 14th inst. announces the marriage on the previous Wednesday evening of Mr. Morris Brown and Miss Fanny Kittles. Mr. Brown is brother of Mr. James L. Brown, of the Press staff.

—We give weekly the actual price paid at McMillan's mill for the different grades of wheat. Farmers may depend on these quotations being perfectly reliable, as we get them from the manager of the mill immediately before going to press on Wednesday evenings.

—It is claimed that Mr. Richardson's defeat in the Wolseley district was partly due to the active part he took for Mr. Dewdney at the last general election. We fear that the author of this, like the correspondent who said Mr. Richardson would be a candidate for the Commons, was joking.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian Church will give a musical and literary entertainment in the Immigration Hall, on Thursday evening, December 24th. There will be a Sunday school Christmas tree in connection with the above. Parties wishing to give presents to the school will please send them to Mrs. Caswell and Mrs. McKay, who will take charge of them and make the awards.

—On Tuesday night last the Royal Templars of Temperance held a Parlor Social in their hall. The attendance was good considering the stormy night. As on former occasions the hall was appropriately decorated. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, readings, etc. Refreshments were also served during the evening. The evening's entertainment closed by singing the Doxology.

—Mr. William McGinn, private secretary to Hon. Mr. Dewdney, Superintendent General of Indian Affairs, is now in Regina, and will probably visit Qu'Appelle before returning to Ottawa. Mr. McGinn is an efficient and painstaking official of the Department and deservedly popular in the Territories where he is best known. His many friends in Qu'Appelle would be pleased to see him.

—While two young men from the College were hauling wood from town on Wednesday last a portion of the load slipped on the horses, which caused them to run away. One of the men, Fitzroy D'Arcy was thrown from the load, and two wheels of the loaded wagon passed over his body, causing internal injuries the nature of which is not yet known. He was carried to the residence of Mr. Boyce, where he received every attention. He is under the care of Dr. Bell.

—In order to accommodate the large travel to the East expected during the excursion season, the C.P.R. is bringing from the East a full equipment of magnificent new passenger coaches. These cars are said to be very fine, being similar to those on the through trains run between Montreal and Chicago. These cars, with the tourist car service, which the C.P.R. will have leaving Winnipeg every Wednesday, are sufficient to assure excursionists of a pleasant trip to the East at small cost.

—One of the Vancouver papers says of the grocery business carried on by Mr. W. A. Clark, formerly of Fort Qu'Appelle and well known in this district: “Prominent among the leading establishments of Vancouver, and one that exercises an important influence on its general trade, and bears the marks of continual increase and prosperity, none perhaps occupies a more prominent position than the firm whose name appears at the head of this article.”

—The Old Country papers contain an account of a marriage which was made an occasion of great demonstration by the friends of the parties. The bridegroom was Mr. Charles Wynn Griffith, son of the late J. Griffith Griffith, of Blas Lanfair, Caernarvonshire, and will be known to many of our readers, he having resided at Edgeley for some time. The bride was Miss Maud Louisa Hallowes, second daughter of the Rev. Brabazon Hallowes, of Gladwell Hall, Derbyshire.

—The entertainment given in aid of the Medicine Hat Hospital on Thursday night last was not as well attended as it should have been, considering that the general public should take a deep interest in promoting the prosperity of this institution. However, a number of the citizens were present, and many more would probably have been there had they not been disappointed on the previous Friday night. Mr. G. S. Davidson, M.L.A., took the chair, and called upon the Misses Boyce, who played the opening duet. The singing of Mrs. Barclay and Mr. Galletly was much enjoyed, as shown by the frequent encores they received. The most appreciated efforts of Miss Lily Evans were her rendering of the Wild Zingarella, Sham O'Brien, and the tableaux of emotions.

SINTALUTA.

Mr. Brown has arrived from Brandon to buy grain for Messrs. McMillan Bros.

Mr. Rowe is putting a frame addition to his stable, capable of holding eight teams.

Mr. Cargo has sold his crop and his hay in the stack to Mr. Cathcart, and has rented his shop to a Mr. Thompson. He intends going into horse dealing.

Mr. Ass Booth had a runaway last week, his team running down the Valley hill at a terrific speed. It was a miraculous escape, as nothing was broken.

THE MILLING INDUSTRY.

The big crop in the North-West has stirred up the milling interest considerably. Some mills which were not operated last year are already working, and others are being overhauled for work as soon as possible, and there will be an idle mill in the country. The mill at Indian Head, as stated in our last issue, after undergoing thorough renovation was ready for the commencement of operations on Monday. The Qu'Appelle Roller Mills provide employment for a number of hands, and already a large amount of business has been done. A number of the millers have also been increasing their storage capacity. The Manitou mill has added a large warehouse. Smith and Brigham are building an elevator in connection with their mill at Mooseminn, and many other improvements to mills have been reported. Another direct result of the big crop is the new mill being built at Regina, to replace the one burned there a couple of years ago. A joint stock company has the enterprise in hand. The mill at Wolseley, under the proprietorship of Messrs. Thompson, McPhail and Dill, is being improved and enlarged. Another new milling enterprise is the proposal to establish a mill at Calgary. The people there want a mill, and they are prepared to give a good bonus to get one. Three parties have offered to build the mill, and it is likely an arrangement will be made with one of them. Many new elevators are also being erected at points all over the country. McColloch & Harriet have just completed a 75,000 bushel house at their mill at Souris. Viewing the movements which are being made throughout the North-West the outlook is most promising.

SHOULD BE LOOSENERED.

A cough should be loosened at once and entirely allayed. To do this nothing exceeds Hagedorn's Pectoral Balsam. Obstructive coughs yield at once to its expectorant, soothing and healing properties, which loosen phlegm and allay irritation.

SHEEP FARMING.

The raising of sheep is a branch of farming which is gaining ground in the North-West, and the following paper, read at the autumn meeting of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association, by Mr. D. G. Hannan, Mount Vernon, Ont., contains some useful information on the subject:—

The value of sheep to the farm is perhaps not fully understood by many farmers. It is an old proverb that whenever the foot of the sheep touches the land it is turned into gold. Sheep husbandry has a value in making the land more profitable, more productive, at a less expenditure than any other animal kept on a farm.

The question of raising sheep for their meat is not an unimportant one; as the population of the country increases the consumption of eatables increases, and the favorite meat, and that which brings the highest price, is lamb, which can now be purchased only as a luxury by those who can afford it.

Sheep farming in Canada does not require large capital invested, and the risk is small, for sheep, if well managed, will die in debt to their owner. Many farmers manage to have a lot of old run down sheep in their flocks, which is bad economy, to say the least, and should be remedied or entirely avoided. And now is the time to attend to this matter. By looking over the flock and selecting out all such as are not doing well and putting them on as good pasture as can be afforded, and with the addition of a little grain, they can be made ready for the butcher by the time winter sets in. So long as a sheep is healthy it can be fattened, but it is not good policy to keep them until they become too old, as it has a tendency to run down the flock and give it a rickish appearance.

Every farmer should look carefully over his flock every fall and select out all that cannot be kept longer with profit. It is frequently the case that lambs are let run with their dams too long, which has an injurious effect upon both, so long as they run together the lamb will depend upon the milk drawn from its mother for sustenance, which often does not amount to much. Consequently both are the worse for not being separated.

About four months is the proper age to wean lambs. Should cold rains prevail during the early fall months, lambs should be put under shelter, and as the season advances they should be kept in at nights and gradually taught to eat; by so doing the change from pasture to dry feed will scarcely be perceptible.

As lambs are one of the largest sources of profit to the sheep farmer, he should observe every requisite to success in rearing them.

It will not require an observing person to keep sheep many years until he will find out that the main thing in wintering them is to keep them up in the fall, if permitted to lose flesh then, they will scarcely recruit again during the entire winter.

A practice now prevailing with many farmers, and one which, in our opinion, cannot be too strongly condemned, is that of allowing grade ram lambs of all descriptions to run without castration, which not only depreciates their value for the butcher but is also the cause of many inferior rams going into service, when by the expenditure of a few dollars extra, pure-bred rams of the various breeds could be secured.

We have no hesitation in saying that there is little or no excuse for the farmer who will at the present time place an inferior or mongrel ram at the head of his flock.

Care and judgment should be exercised in the selection of a ram, as much of the future value of the flock will depend on the impression he leaves on his offspring. A man may save himself a lot of trouble and disappointment by making the head a first principle in establishing a flock. The head of an animal is the main index to his purity of blood, strength of constitution, and overall fitness for the service for which he is intended. If you go for breed you should look above all, to the head. If your aim be style or fashion, you must seek this in the head, as nine times in ten that very accommodating phase known as quality should prove itself by a good head. It is the head that carries impression and sets off the whole proportion. It will overcome many other defects, and will go a long way with judges in determining their awards in the show-ring.

The man who would succeed as a breeder of sheep must be always aiming higher by a constant endeavor to bring his flock to a more perfect state of perfection.

THE BEST PROTECTION.

As a protection from the results of colds, specks, burns, scalds, sore throat, and all painful diseases, Hagedorn's Yellow Oil holds first place. Its efficacy has been proved thousands of times. It should be in every household.

CONSIDER THIS FACT.

The fact that rheumatism is caused by an ailment in the blood points to the remedy Burdock Blood Bitters, which removes all impurities from the blood not only poisonous rheumatic humors but even obstinate serpentine and cancerous taints.

QU'APPELLE MARKETS.

Wheat, No. 1 hard	67c.
Wheat, No. 2 hard	64c.
Wheat, No. 3 hard	61c.
Wheat, No. 1 Northern	64c.
Wheat, No. 2 Northern	61c.
Wheat, No. 1 Regular	45c.
Wheat, No. 2 Regular	40c.
Beef, live	36c.
Beef, dressed	6c.
Beef, cut	7 to 12c.
Mutton	11c.
Pork	8c.
Lamb	12c.
Checkers per lb.	10c.
Geese	12c.
Turkey	15c.
Fish, whitefish	6c.
E. C. Salmon	18c.
Potatoes, per bushel	25c.
Cabbage	8c.
Eggs, per dozen	20c.
Butter	20c.
Wood, per load	$2.00 to $2.50.
Hay, per ton	$5.00.

CHEAP PATENT STOVES.

Cheap Patent Stoves.
Cheap Patent Stove Pipes.
Cheap Patent Hollow Ware.
Cook Stoves from $16 to $80.
Heating Stoves from $3.50 to $30.
Patent Stove Pipes and Elbows from 15c.
Hollow Ware Pot, Kettle, and Spider for $1.75.
Samples and catalogue can be seen at
CLARKE'S BLACKSMITH SHOP.
3-6 Qu'Appelle Station.

$25 REWARD.

The above Reward will be paid by the undersigned to anyone giving information which will lead to the conviction of the person or persons who MURKED & COOKED DOG on or about November 30th, belonging to the undersigned.
4-6 G. D. MACKAY.

Qu'Appelle Observatory.

Reading of the thermometer for the week ending Tuesday, November 24th.
Maximum. Minimum.

Wednesday, Nov. 18th...	32	2
Thursday, Nov. 19th...	17	10
Friday, Nov. 20th...	38	16
Saturday, Nov. 21st...	30	6
Sunday, Nov. 22nd...	15	11
Monday, Nov. 23rd...	14	11
Tuesday, Nov. 24th...	15	1

WIND VELOCITY AND DIRECTION.
6 A.M. 1 P.M. 6 P.M.

Wednesday, Nov. 18 SW 8 S 5

Thursday, Nov. 19 Calm S 18 E 25

Friday, Nov. 20 S 8 SW 16 S 4

Saturday, Nov. 21 SE 26 S 26 NW 16

Sunday, Nov. 22 S 6 SW 26 W 21

Monday, Nov. 23 Calm S 3 S 3

Tuesday, Nov. 24 SW 13 S 4 SW 10

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 31.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 8.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 10.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 16.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 22.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 25.

WEDNESDAY,